FEI-QUÉBEC LUNCH AND LEARN

Health and the organization: Does it pay to take care of employee health?

Thursday, April 10, 2008 at noon

- Speakers:
- Réal Cassista, Team Leader, Global Health Management, Fédération des caisses Desjardins du Québec
- Michèle Boisvert, Group and Healthcare Practice Leader, Watson Wyatt Worldwide
- Claudine Ducharme, Senior Consultant, Health and Productivity, Watson Wyatt Worldwide
- Theme: Employee health has a significant impact on the productivity and financial results of organizations. In the last 20 years, health-related costs have quadrupled in the country, going from 600 million to 2.4 billion dollars. This formidable increase is also associated with increases in group health plan and absenteeism costs.
- To remain at the forefront of prevention in the area of workplace health, the Desjardins Movement has adopted a global approach to health management that has shown positive financial results.
- During this conference, we will present Desjardins' implementation plan of the last few years, as well as Watson Wyatt's return on investment calculation.
- If you want to know more about factors that result in health and productivity costs, measures that can counter the effect of these factors and ways you can improve your organization's financial health, register as of now.

The conference will be held in French.
